Posey County, Indiana is an ideal landing place for travelers. It has been for thousands of years.

A bird’s-eye view of middle-America shows two great rivers tracing hundreds of miles of landscape, literally carving out the borders of Midwest states. The junction where those rivers meet is Posey County and it’s a place that’s been chosen over and over as a perfect jumping-off point. The waterways and lush resources attracted pre-Columbian native settlers, early explorers and scholars, vast farming operations, industries and pioneers of all sorts.

Known as a place of wild abundance and surprisingly big ideas, Posey County has hosted experiments in spirit, science, industry, art and agriculture that have raised eyebrows and global consciousness.

Today, it’s still a place where people gather near the rivers to work and play, to bike, ride, birdwatch, fish, hunt and hike. We invite you to soak up history in our walkable towns and sample farm fresh foods. Buy some art or rent a golf cart. If you can stay a while, try out a Hoosier sunset or some dark-sky star gazing. Amazing!

Welcome to Posey County. So glad you stopped by.

Visit Posey County

We love Going There!
Posey County has it all. Discerning people have known this much longer than you might imagine. They have enjoyed the area’s beauty, rivers, forests, fields, and serenity. More recently, they have added amenities, participated in festivals, and contributed to an impressive amount of history. We’ll look at these recent additions, but first, let’s meet some farmers.

#visitposeycounty #itsallnatural #outdoorsyoubave
7 Centuries of Agriculture

Many Americans start counting our years from 1776. The Posey County area has been farmed for over 700 years! People of the Mississippian culture, or Native American “Mound Builders,” were an innovative group and the region’s first farmers. Corn was a staple crop.

Doubtless, part of the attraction was not one, but two rivers, the Ohio and the Wabash. The rivers were sources of water, food, and transportation. New people have always found their way here. After the Mound Builders, other tribes moved into the area, built villages of log houses, planted orchards, and cultivated plantations.1 They developed commodity specialties and traded among tribes. A new wave of people was coming.

Shall We Gather at the River?

Around the early 1800s, settlers of European descent began migrating to present-day Posey County. Once again, people traveled on, and settled by, the rivers. First in Mt. Vernon, then in New Harmony.

Visit the rivers.

You can feel water’s continuing appeal to humankind. As we watch them, rivers seem eternal and immutable, reflectors of the weather around them at the surface. At any time of year, you’ll have excellent river viewing points. Try Mt. Vernon’s Riverbend Park on the Ohio, or New Harmony. Harmonie State Park, the Old Dam, and Dogtown Ferry Public Fishing Area and Boat Ramp on the Wabash, and walking/cycling trails along both rivers.1

For still water, take a trip to Hovey Lake and the marshlands near The Point. The Point is where the Wabash River meets the Ohio, most often the first thing people notice when they look at a map of Indiana. In this area, you’ll also find Twin Swamps Nature Preserve, a cottonwood/bald cypress swamp and an overcup oak swamp, divided by an area of southern flatwoods. The preserve covers almost 600 acres.

Settling in for the Long Haul

Getting here was only the beginning for settlers. Next, they had to build homes, stores, churches, and gathering places. They also had to clear and cultivate this land. That happened first in two places: Mt. Vernon and New Harmony. Let’s take a closer look at these towns. We’ll begin beside the Ohio River.

Mt. Vernon

Brief History

Mt. Vernon is the county seat and the largest city in Posey County. The county is named for General Thomas Posey, Governor of the Indiana Territory. Mt. Vernon was named in honor of George Washington’s Mt. Vernon estate. But that was not always the case.

In 1806, Andrew McFadden was the first settler in the Mt. Vernon area. He named the settlement McFadden’s Bluff. This name continued to be used for some time even after the town was platted as Mt. Vernon in 1816. A post office called “Mount Vernon” has been in operation since 1818. Beyond the town was a wilderness of mostly unexplored forest.

Mt. Vernon Sites

As you walk around Mt. Vernon, be sure to notice its historic sites: the Posey County Courthouse Square, Mt. Vernon Downtown Historic District, Welborn Historic District and the William Connerman House, all of which have been placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Attractions

Riverbend Park at the Mt. Vernon riverfront

Enjoy open, public space, benches, tables and playground equipment and take in amazing views! Flatboats, bulky craft with squared ends and a flat bottom, were once loaded nearby and steered downriver as far as New Orleans to get local goods to market. Today, flatboats have given way to barges, but the Ohio remains an important waterway to move coal and grain. When you visit sites along the riverfront, you’ll see commerce passing in front of you.

Depending on the time you visit, you may find Riverbend Park to be the anchor point of local parades and festivals. River Days, the Wine & Arts Festival, Riverbend Market Days, Memorial Day Service, Fourth of July fireworks and concerts, and Christmas on Main Street are just a few of the events. You may also catch an outdoor movie or a live concert. Keep coming back!

Harmonie / New Harmony

Brief History

Let’s move along to the Wabash. Today’s New Harmony was the second town settled in Posey County. But it was not New when it was new. Harmony is an appropriate name for a town created specifically to be a spiritual community. It was founded in 1814 by a group of 800 Pietists from Württemberg, Germany who purchased nearly 30,000 acres beside the Indiana Territory’s Wabash River.

The Harmonie Society was led by George Rapp. Their literal interpretation of biblical text, combined with their interpretation of current world events, led them to believe that a Second Coming of Jesus Christ was imminent. As a society and as individuals, they pursued Christian perfection through every aspect of their daily conduct. To that end, they created a highly ordered and productive community at New Harmony.

The community was entirely self-sufficient and produced a wide variety of goods that were recognized worldwide for their fine quality. Harmonist wares were sold throughout the United States and overseas in the British Isles, the Netherlands, Switzerland and Germany. In 1825, the Harmonists relocated to Pennsylvania, site of their first community in North America.

New Harmony

In 1825, with his business partner, William Maclure, Robert Owen purchased the community of New Harmony, hoping to establish a model “Community of Equality” where education and social equality would flourish. Maclure, a wealthy businessman and well-respected geologist, attracted many well-known scholars of the early 19th century to New Harmony.

Robert Owen’s social experiment dissolved by 1827. Despite its breakdown, Owen’s utopian dream brought significant contributions to American scientific and educational theory, study, and practice. Owen’s efforts to effect change and enlightenment came to fruition through the work of his children in New Harmony and the young scientists and educators who came with William Maclure.

Today, New Harmony’s history, architecture, historic buildings, gardens and nature trails attract curious visitors as well as residents and institutions that have similar values and want to work toward the community’s sustainability.

Attractions

“Quaint. Quiet. Relaxing.” are all words locals use to describe Posey County. For New Harmony, we might add “intriguing.”

While the many societies and schools present during the town’s heyday have long since disbanded or closed, the place remains. More than 30 structures from the Harmonist and Owenite utopian communities remain as part of the New Harmony Historic District, which is a National Historic Landmark.

Walk the same streets and trails used by students of enlightenment. Pause and reflect in their carefully tended gardens. Tour this fascinating town.

New Harmony is a hub for the arts. You’ll see that in festivals and events that often are gifts to the community and visitors. There’s something in every season. It could be the Harmony Spring Market, First Brush of Spring!, Arts in Harmony Festival, the autumn Kunstfest, or winter’s Christmas in New Harmony. Or all of them! And there’s much more.

New Harmony abounds with groomed walking/carting/biking paths. From the town, there is a trail to Harmonie State Park, which has roadways and trails for all levels of hikers and bicyclists.
We're often asked, “Where should I go around here for food and drink?” That’s not the simple request it seems. Posey County has quite a few delicious options. So, keeping with our history theme, they are ordered by the date each town was founded.

These lists of dining options are not exhaustive, but they offer a fine starting point. We've been eating well here for about 200 years now. We think you're in for a great meal.

Feeling adventurous? Follow the towns as they are ordered. Stop when you're hungry. Look around. Take some pictures. Then get back on the road. Remember, it's the journey as well as the destination. You'll cover a lot of scenic territory and you'll understand why we enjoy living here.

Daily guided tours at 1 p.m.
Your tour begins at Richard Meier’s New Harmony Atheneum. During your tour you will be able to visit several of our historic sites such as Community House No. 2, one of four large dormitories for the Harmonists, and the David Lenz House, built circa 1822 and restored to its original appearance, including authentic Harmonist furniture.
Explore all of this and more in Historic New Harmony.
Tour times vary in winter.
